

inflammation & necrosis

Acute inflammation is an early defense mechanism to contain an infection, prevent its spread from the initial focus and signal subsequent specific immune receptors.

Tissue damage is caused to some extent by complement and macrophages but mostly by neutrophils.

- both statements are true
- both statements are false
- the first statement is true, the second is false
- the first statement is false, the second is true